Intro

Who We Are

Studio Freight is an independent creative studio built on principle.

+ Independent

We rise to the level of the limits we accept. At the heart of Studio Freight is independent thinking, we are owned by ourselves and collaborate with those willing to choose and create the realities they want to live in. There are no rules, only consequences.

Creative Studio

Studio Freight is a creative business, practice, and project. We build brands and experiences. We incubate products and experiments. We invest in companies and people. Our pursuits vary widely, but the approach remains — a great creative practice is the known path to great unknowns.

+ Built on Principle

If we don't decide how we build, others will. For our team and clients, our principles lead us to choose the right partners, avoid the traps of soft thinking, filter great opportunities from great temptations, shake the malaise of hard moments, honor both performance and artistry, and make work we're all damn proud of.

What We Do

We bring together the best thinkers and makers to move your mission forward.

Approach

Creating and selling experiences you love is the best job in the world. But before Easol, it didn't feel that way. We partnered with the Easol (dream) team to rethink everything and bring their platform to the people.

We interviewed creators, tested out competitors, laughed at wild stories, made custom music, and cared for Easol like it was our own. Best of all, the founders became friends.

Like an easel is the scaffolding painters use to paint, we renamed to Easol as the platform experience creators use to create. We launched experience commerce as a new category. We did personas, taglines, verbal identity, visual identity, motion design, product design, campaigns... it feels like we did it all.

The essence of "loremaking" led us to an epic brand system. You see, Easol is all about creating and sharing experiences that transcend mere words, the ones where each retelling becomes more grand, more courageous, more sensational. Until one day, gradually and without notice, they become lore.

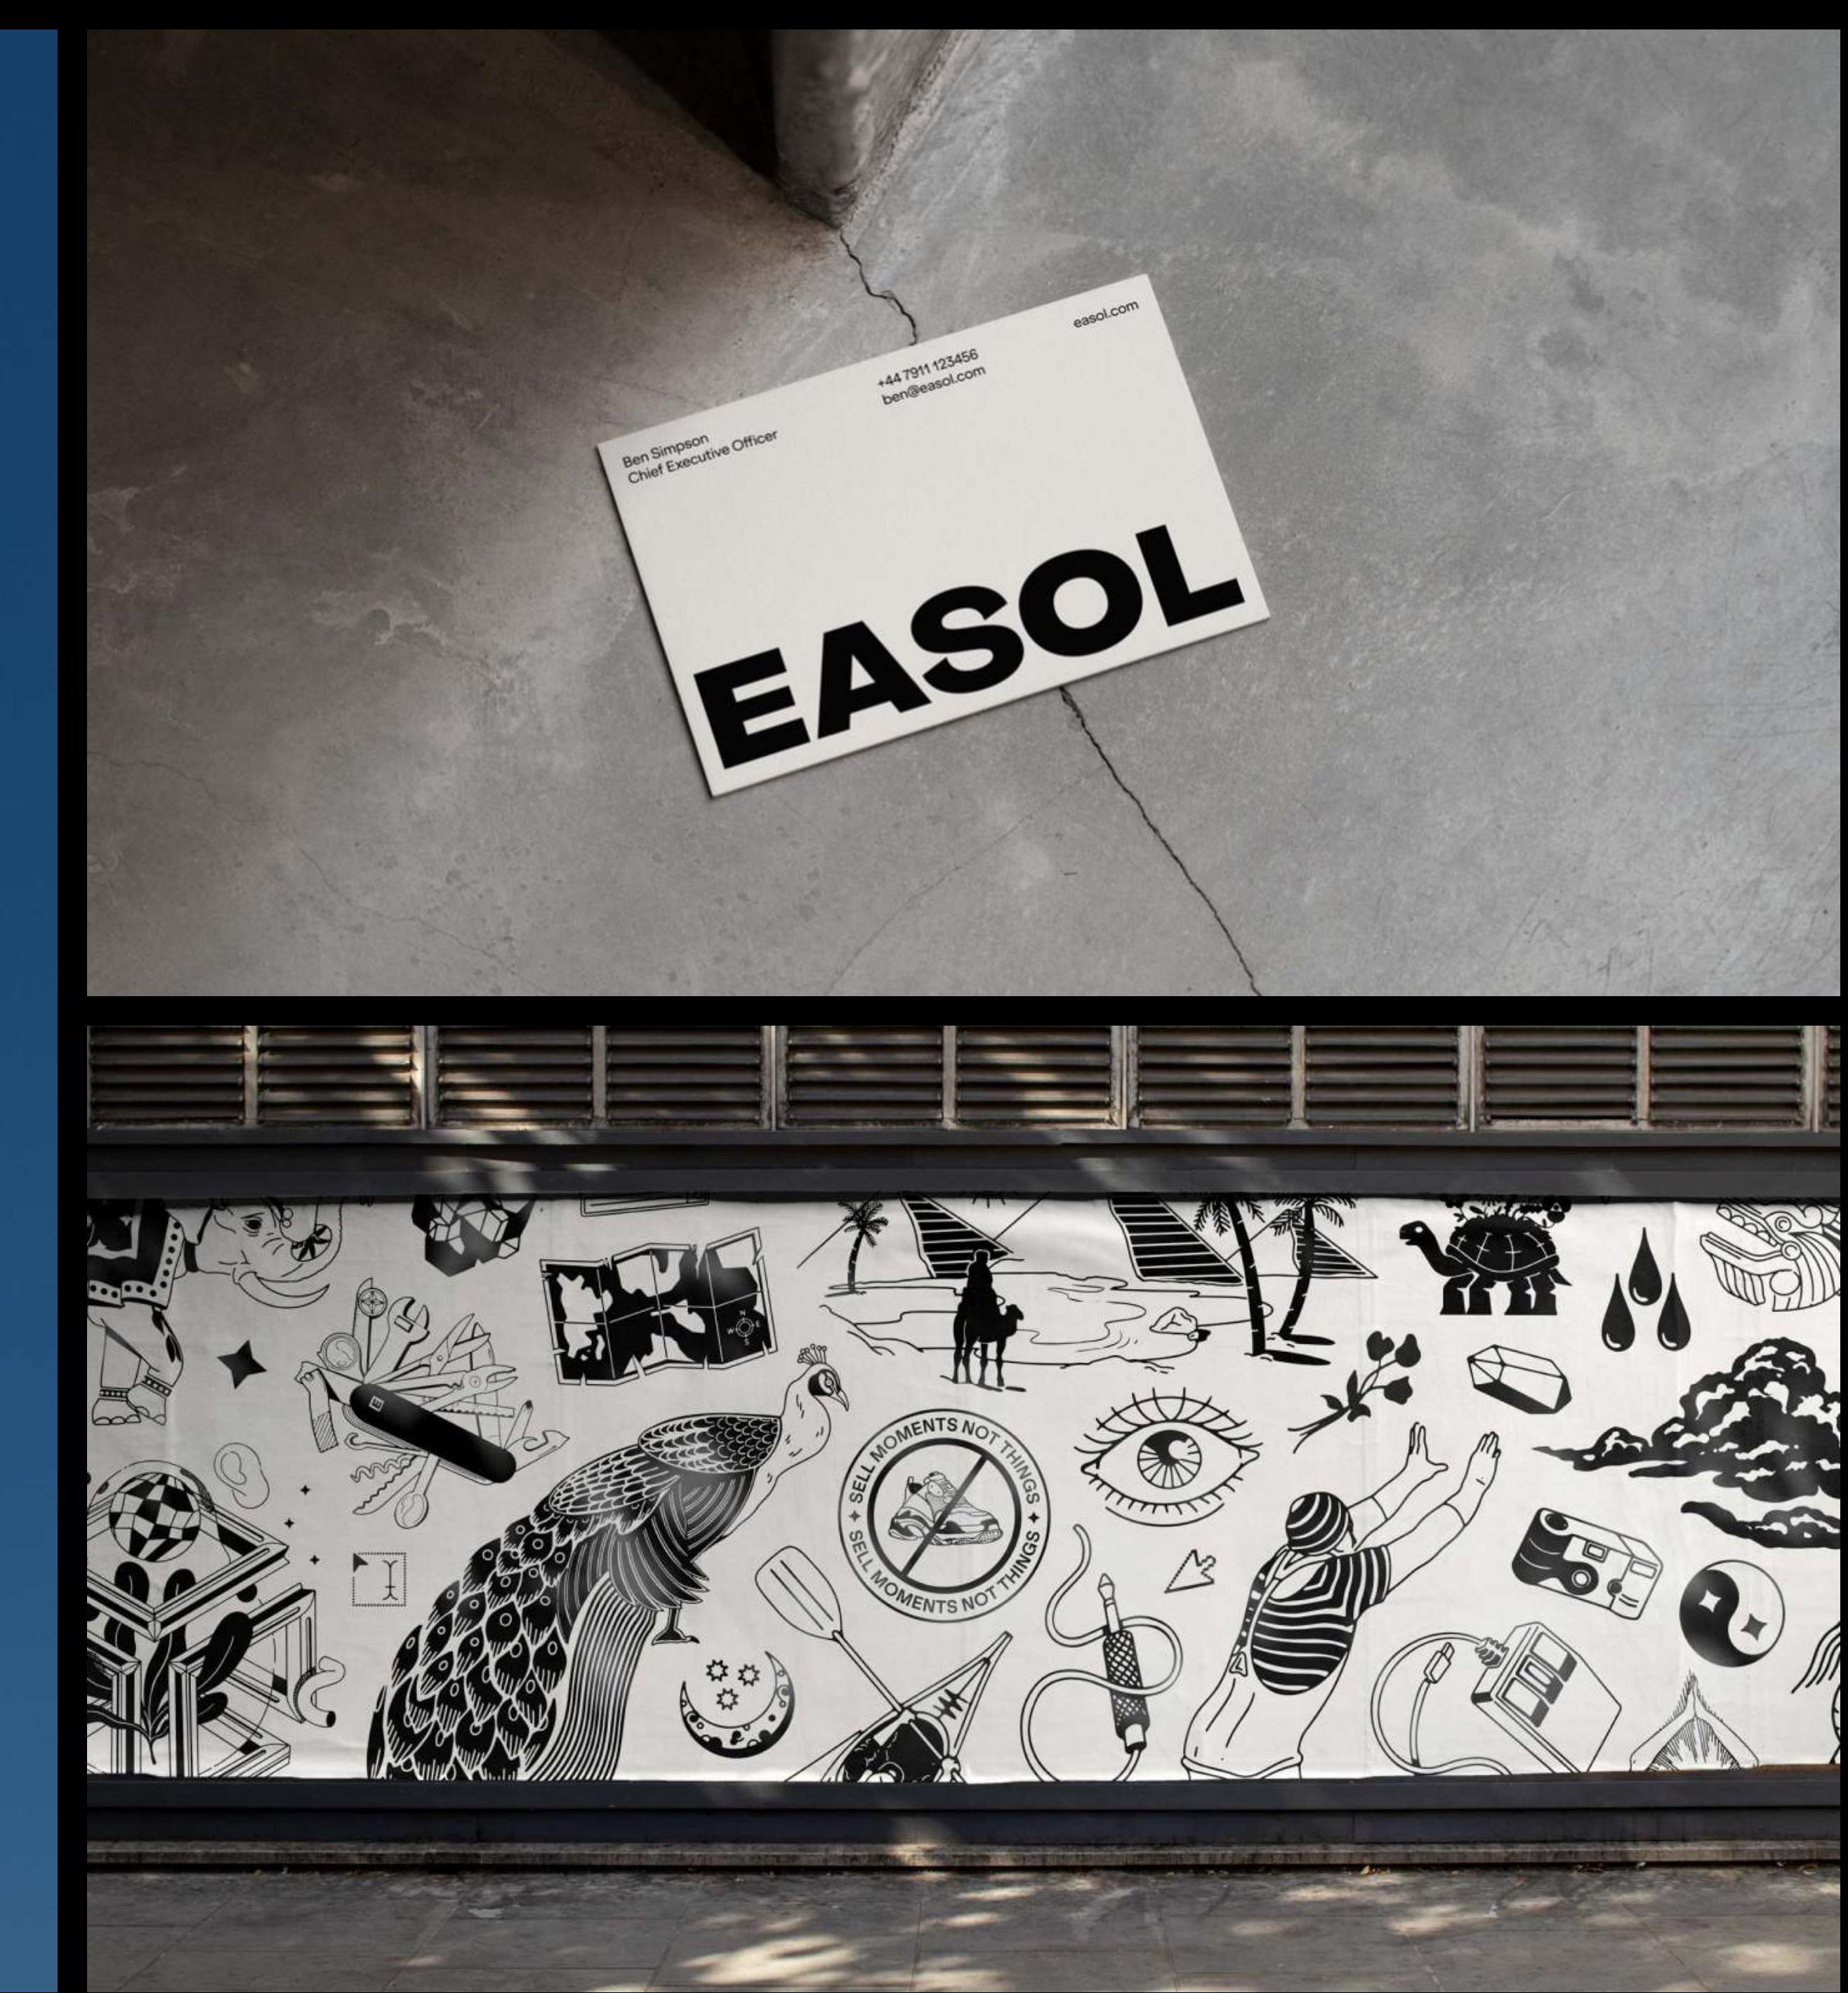

Outcomes

Easol was a team of ~10 when we started, now they're 90+ with offices in London, Lisbon, and New York City.

Following the brand and website launch, they raised a pre-emptive $25m Series A. The website and campaign reduced the sales cycle from first call to close by 50%. The showcase event launch had a 45% conversion from ad to demo (against benchmark of 5%), and 7% conversion to full subscription. The ad cost per demo improved to $20 (down from $60 prior to launch) and was profitable within the first 6 months. Easol has won design awards and the praise of their customers.

From global events company, Roamy: "This is the best brand in experiences we have seen. How do we recreate something like this for our business?"

From the largest wellness platform in the world, Wanderlust: "You've built an amazing platform and I'm excited to see it grow and see Wanderlust grow alongside you. I wanted to compliment you on your branding and style... Easol has very recognizable design and branding and I have some idea how hard that is to create."

+ The attention to detail and care in every single person's work at Studio Freight is fucking exceptional. They're the most visually and aesthetically aligned people I have ever worked with, but also very different, which took us in directions I would never have thought of. If they don't agree with something, they aren't afraid to fight their corner. I can't stand 'yes' creatives so this was hugely important for me. They treated everything we said about what we wanted to do with proper respect — and treated Easol like their baby too — then made it into gold dust.

+ Approach

As a global investing platform, Republic makes it possible for 2.5+ million community members across 150+ countries to access private market investment opportunities. To extend their mission and expand their platform, they're using crypto tokenomics to allow non-accredited investors to participate in the upsides of their success.

We linked up with the Republic team to launch Republic Note, or R/Note. They were looking to capitalize on a fast-moving wave, which meant we had to go from zero to hero in a matter of weeks.

On the ledger of needs was designing "crypto's most transparent whitepaper." We loved the name and the idea of financial transparency was carried through the brand, website, and collateral creation with glassine 3D graphics, crystalline icons, and outlined illustrations. We scaled up trust by pairing a no-nonsense sans with an accounting-friendly monotype and building a color system of bankable blues with black and white.

+ Outcomes

From the start, all efforts were pointed towards a successful ICO (initial coin offering) for the Republic Note.

The launch was a top priority for Republic, such that their executives and institutional investors, like Binance and Naspers, were watching with keen eyes. Luckily, we love it when the stakes are high.

The Republic Note went on to raise millions of dollars from thousands of individual investors in a few weeks. All in all, it did 560% of the goal.

In the words of Republic Note Lead, Jensen Vu: "The quality is unmatched! Thanks to the team."

Community Benefits

Private markets are changing rapidly, as do the evolving capital market regulations. The two are converging to drive a new landscape. These changes will make capital more accessible, inclusive, transparent, and central to Republic's mission.

Since its founding in 2016, Republic's products and services guided by the belief that capital should be accessible to anyone, anywhere, regardless of geography. At Republic's core is the belief that blockchain makes it possible to invest in start-ups, small companies, and many other private asset classes. The critical pillars of Republic have developed into three main verticals: digital assets, crypto, and web3 divisions.

While the Republic Note is the primary vehicle for Republic Capital, it is also the backbone of the Republic ecosystem. Cryptocurrency and web3 are integral parts of Republic's mission to democratize capital.

Technical Infrastructure

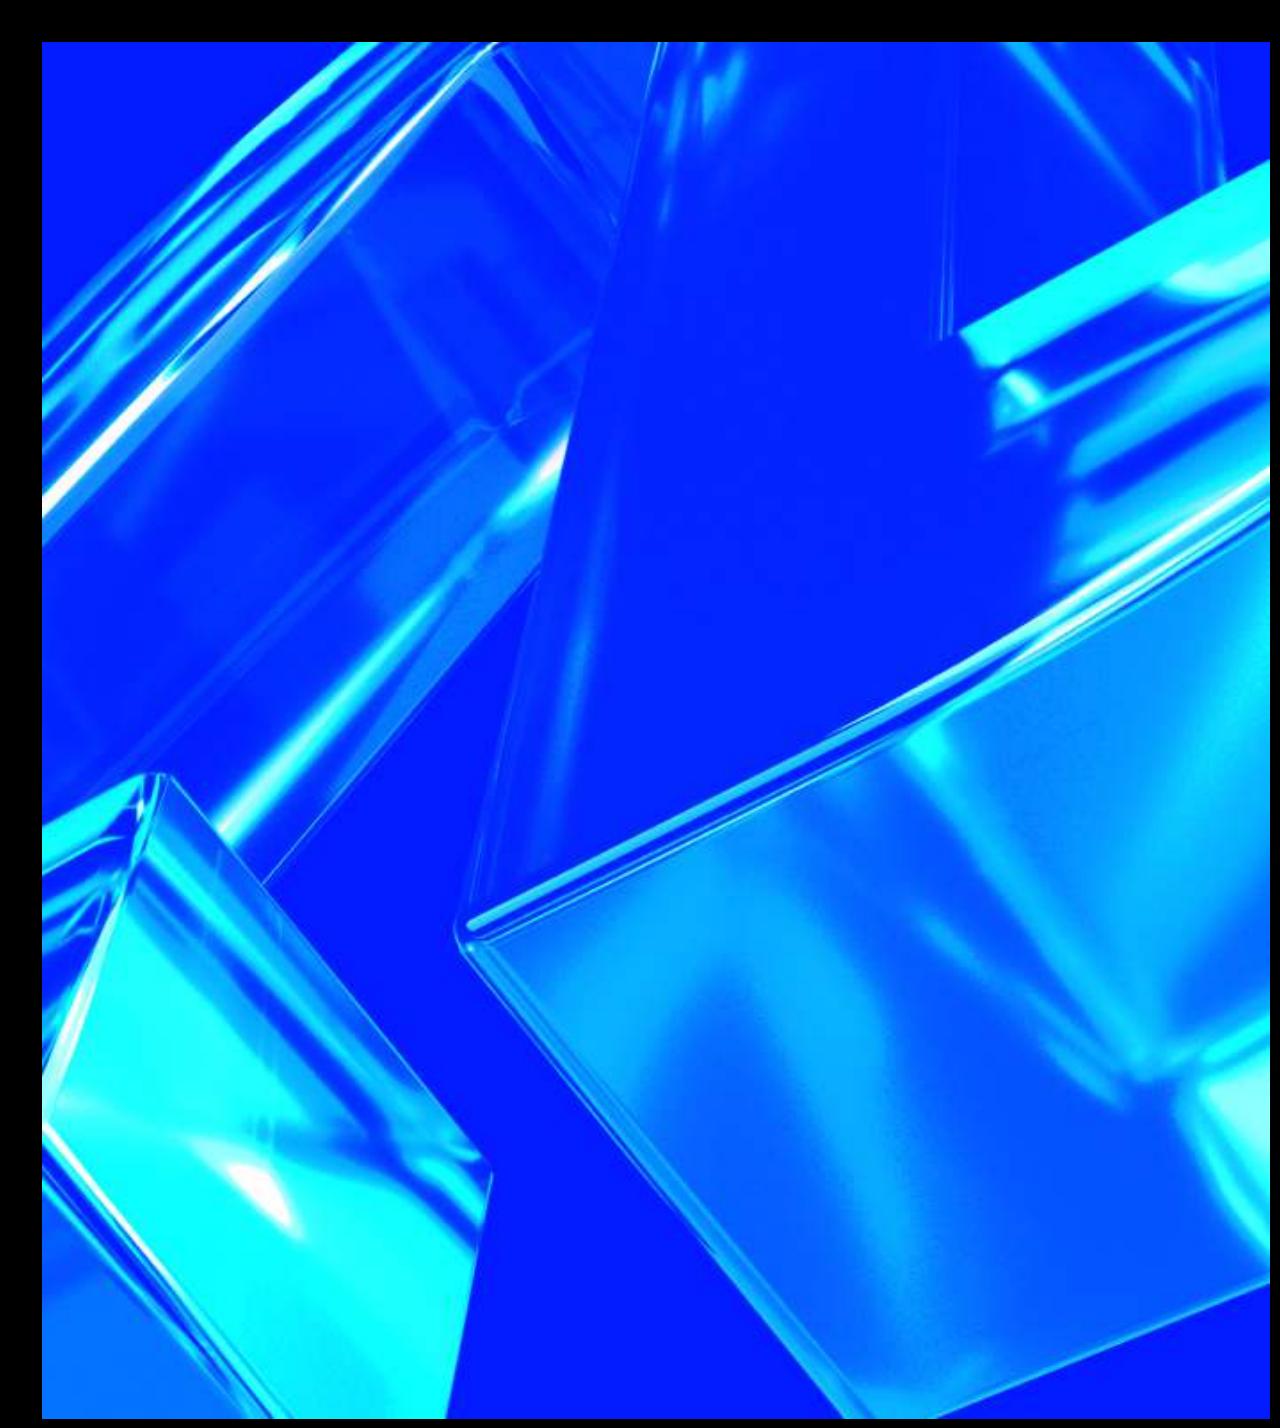

As the blockchain industry has matured, so too have the various blockchain networks upon which Republic Note is built. The Republic ecosystem has helped to develop a variety of such networks, giving us clear insights into their strengths and weaknesses.

+ We challenged Studio Freight to bring the sauce for an ambitious redesign of our digital security, Republic Note — including logos, motion, web, and beyond. They produced exceptional creative, working against a timeline that was, to put it mildly, insanely aggressive. Studio Freight entirely delivered on the age-old agency cliché of becoming a true extension of our team. Their culture, communication, and energy propelled our work through lots of stakeholders with justifiably high expectations. For Republic Note's successful relaunch, Freight undoubtedly met the challenge we issued — and more. They brought the sauce.

Approach

It happened in the flip of a skillet. In order to survive, restaurants had to become technology companies capable of online ordering and digital marketing. In their desperation, they settled for third-party tools and delivery platforms that took their data, customers, and margins — and probably their lunch money too. Lunchbox emerged to put business utensils back in the hands of restaurant owners.

We partnered with Lunchbox to clarify and design their brand perspective, where the spirit of chef craftsmanship breaks bread with business savvy. With fierce advocacy, with forks and knives, with whatever it takes, Lunchbox unabashedly pursues a better world for restaurants.

To bring this to life, the brand system features loud colors (nutritious fact: the primary yellow hex code is #FEED01), ravenous bold type, illustrations inspired by traditional American tattoos, and a digital experience that invites restaurant owners to the table, at the point of a knife cursor.

Outcomes

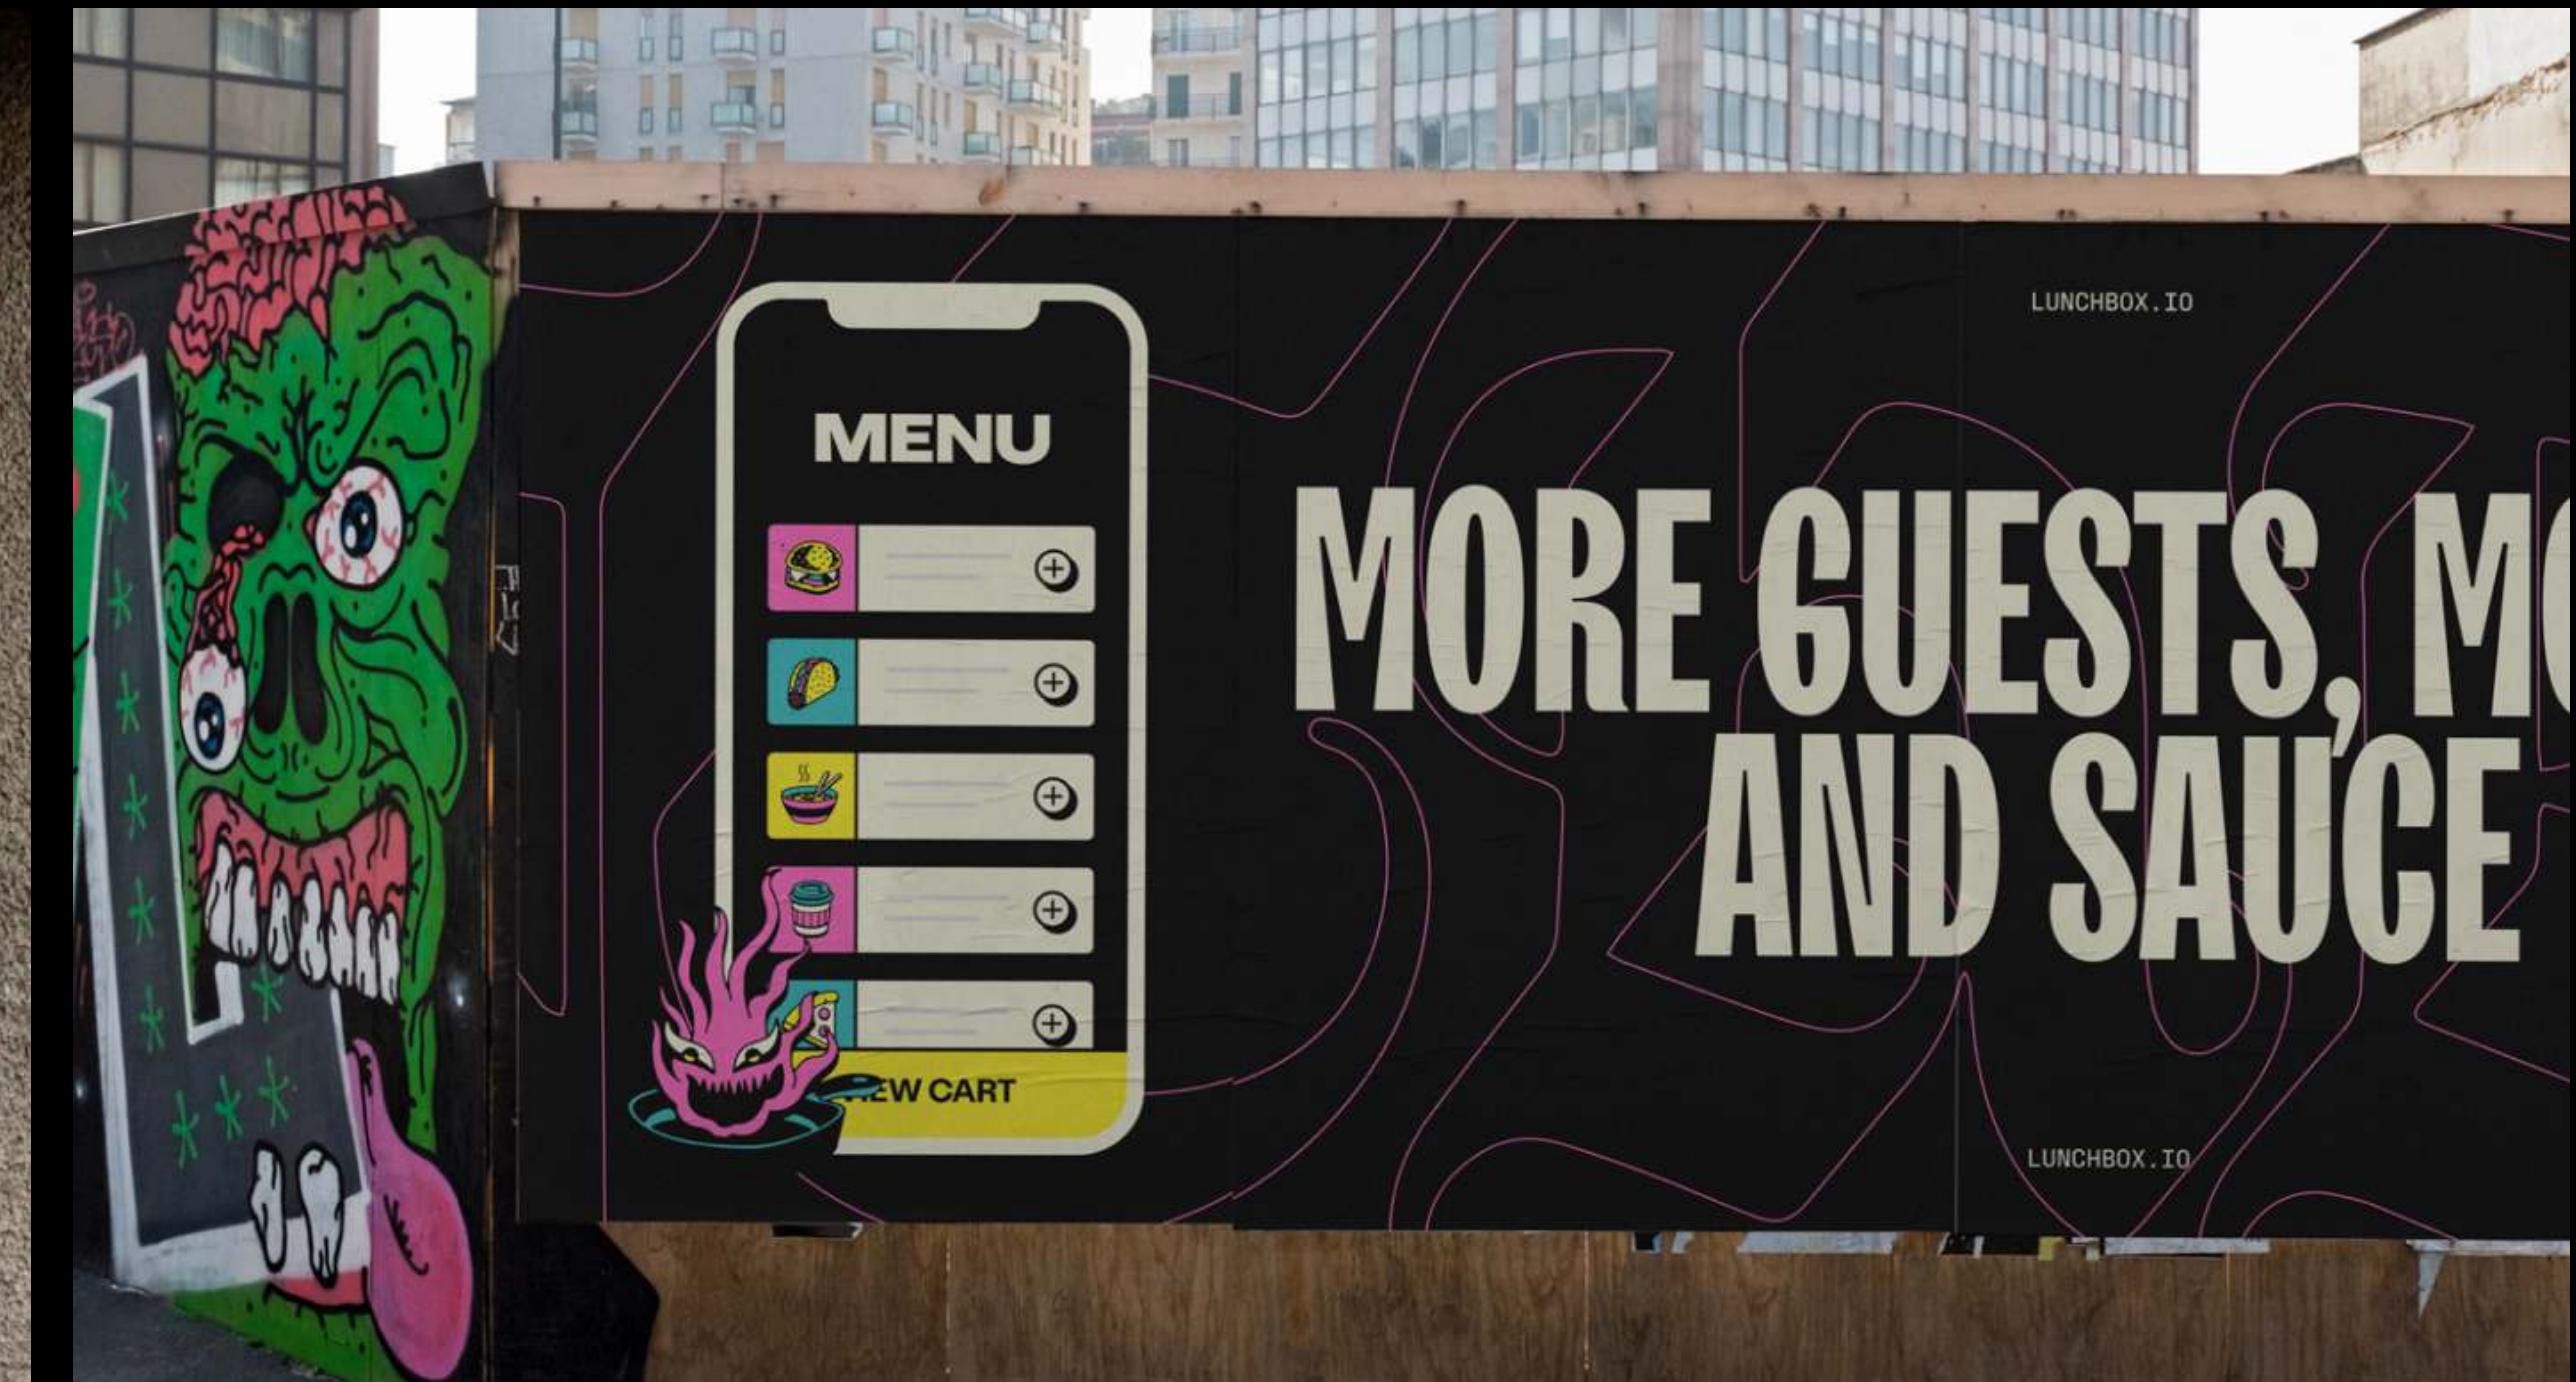

“Hey hey, I am in the middle of a project but ready to walk away if you have time for us. That’s how much I loved your shit. Let me know if we can work together.”

This initial email from Lunchbox CEO, Nabeel Alamgir, set the tone for our partnership. The energy, vision, and intensity were sky high — and the results speak while chewing for themselves.

Lunchbox raised a $50M Series B led by Coatue with participation from executives at Sweetgreen, DoorDash, and &pizza. The website experience has won design awards and powered consecutive quarters of record-setting sales. They are frequently named to industry-leader lists.

More recently, their growing success and credibility has afforded Lunchbox the ability to up-level from supporting independent restaurants to securing the trust (and bag) of large enterprise customers.

Food tech for food people. As the operating system for online ordering, Lunchbox is the secret sauce 1,000+ restaurants use to get more. More guests, more orders, and more money.

TYPEFACE

Our button system is designed to be obvious, flexible, and motivating. On hover, the text animates as a marquee to create a fun surprise-and-delight moment for the user.

As a general rule of thumb, let the importance of the CTA dictate which button style is used. To see the full suite of interactive UI, please reference our Lunchbox Style Guide.

HEADERS

TT Trailers was developed as part of a new generation of narrow typefaces meant for movie credits and posters. It has a bold and distinctively playful sensibility.

We use TT Trailers exclusively for headers. We have a lot to say, and its narrow structure allows us to pack in a high character count at a large scale in tight spaces.

ILLUSTRATION

The Lunchbox illustration style draws from the iconic art of traditional American tattooing, where bold black lines, vibrant colors, and form are pushed to extremes.

INSPIRATION

Our illustrations represent the grit, culture, and rebellious spirit surrounding chefs and their kitchens. This fuels the heartbeats of Lunchbox and its fearless stance on the food industry.

ILLUSTRATION

To create halftone patterns, design a flatish set of illustrations and run it through a blemish halftone, elliptical filter in Photoshop at a large resile (>500).

Use halftones to create texture. They can be applied, arranged and cropped in variety of ways while still ensuring an interesting overall composition.

PROCESS

(1) Prepare a detailed sketch and plan shadows.
(2) Trace pen tool in Illustrator (using a single stroke weight to maintain consistency).

(3) At a large scale, filter in Photoshop to bleed the artwork, which produces a screenprint aesthetic.

Tip for (3): Use a high-centered threshold on a levels tool & a greater blur. Adjust intensity to create a clean result.

+ I think the best way to describe Studio Freight is to say that they're my partners. Actually, even better than partners, they're like an extension of myself and my company. Why do I say that? Because working with them felt like finding my voice all over again. They were able to translate what I asked for into something even better. That's so important and rare, and what makes it a true partnership. It's a trait that great leaders experience. Who is Steve Jobs without Jony Ive? Bill Gates. What does Sergey Brin build without Larry Page? Yahoo. Where is John Lennon without Paul McCartney? Dead. You get the point. I don't think I'll ever find another partner who has been this in sync with what I'm looking for.

Approach

The universal adoption of blockchain technology has been foiled by a core issue — they're siloed. Siloed blockchains severely limit the audiences, capabilities, and functionalities that developers can access, and diminish the user experience quality their applications can achieve.

Evmos solves this by combining EVM compatibility with cross-chain connectivity. Now it's possible to build with the depth, familiarity, and developer-friendliness of Ethereum (EVM) and the breadth, interoperability, and freedom of Cosmos.

They have a highly technical offering and vision, so we first focused on making Evmos make sense. The idea of astrogation, a fictional term for safely navigating space, was a north star for how we thought about the brand experience.

We drew on themes from the worlds of Ethereum and Cosmos to create a familiar yet novel sensibility. Because technical company requires demands significant reading, we created custom type as a key distinction. Ultimately, we developed a digital-first brand system capable of keeping their big vision, expanding ecosystem, and growing feature set in orbit.

Outcomes

The crypto landscape can be a tumultuous and unforgiving place with fast-changing market sentiments. Soaring today, crashed tomorrow.

Evmos has a loyal community with deep affinity for the brand, and a governance cohort, so we needed to honor what they loved while moving the brand forward. Evmos also has a vocal crowd of eager critics.

We launched the new brand and website as Evmos 2.0 to indicate that while the vision is the same, there's new leadership, new possibilities, and new expectations. The reception has been exceedingly positive, from the community and critics alike.

We launched Evmos on August 2, 2023 and are still gathering data points on results.

Our 3D renders are rooted in real-world physics. These tools allow builders to "place" objects in space, which places the viewer in a position of looking out at the vastness of the universe.

The image shows a dark, textured background. On the left side, there is a large, luminous purple spiral galaxy with a bright center and swirling arms. On the right side, there is a grid of text samples. The top row contains the text "NB International Pro / Bold & Regular" in a white sans-serif font. To the right of this text are four small, thin-line icons: a bold icon, a user icon, a case icon, and a track icon. The bottom row contains the text "EeFfC" and "0.123 /4567" in a large, bold, white sans-serif font.

4 & 8 Column Example

The grid is just as essential to the Exmos design system as the assets that sit on top of it. It enables consistency across all branded touch-points and is intentionally designed to be rigid yet flexible. Leverage it to compose beautiful and structured layouts, all the way from the smallest to biggest brand moments. Details matter.

The image features a large, luminous purple and white spiral cloud or nebula set against a dark, black background. The central bright area of the cloud has a yellowish-white glow, creating a focal point. The surrounding gas is a deep purple, transitioning into darker shades towards the edges. The overall effect is one of motion and energy.

+ Undeniable creative monsters. Studio Freight is a must-hire agency for any CMO looking to undertake a massive rebrand. They were a true extension of the team, slotting in seamlessly to take the visual direction of Evmos to heights unseen. Even more than that, to understand and effectively communicate intensely technical concepts — and to distill those concepts into language even mom and dad can understand — is no simple feat. The work is pure genius. All sauce. I can't express enough how proud I am.

Approach

Supply chains are loosely-held disasters of endless, overwhelming coordination needs. To cope, companies rely on expensive, slow-moving, patchwork solutions from third-party providers.

We set out to make it easy to understand, and impossible to ignore, how Stord is delivering the future of logistics today. We first established the category, Cloud Supply Chain, as the a paradigm shift for organizing and optimizing supply chains with the ease, speed, and flexibility of the cloud.

Stord exists to unlock total visibility and enable unlimited optimization. This led us to ask, what would it look like see the entire supply chain at once? In response, we built the brand and digital experience around an idyllic, always-moving supply chain city that can be seen and controlled from a godlike perspective.

With the ability to see the whole picture, or zoom into the details, the design system covers the every step of the journey from port-to-porch.

Outcomes

With a huge placement on a state-of-the-art, 386,000 square foot facility in Atlanta, Stord holds the record for the largest logo we've ever done.

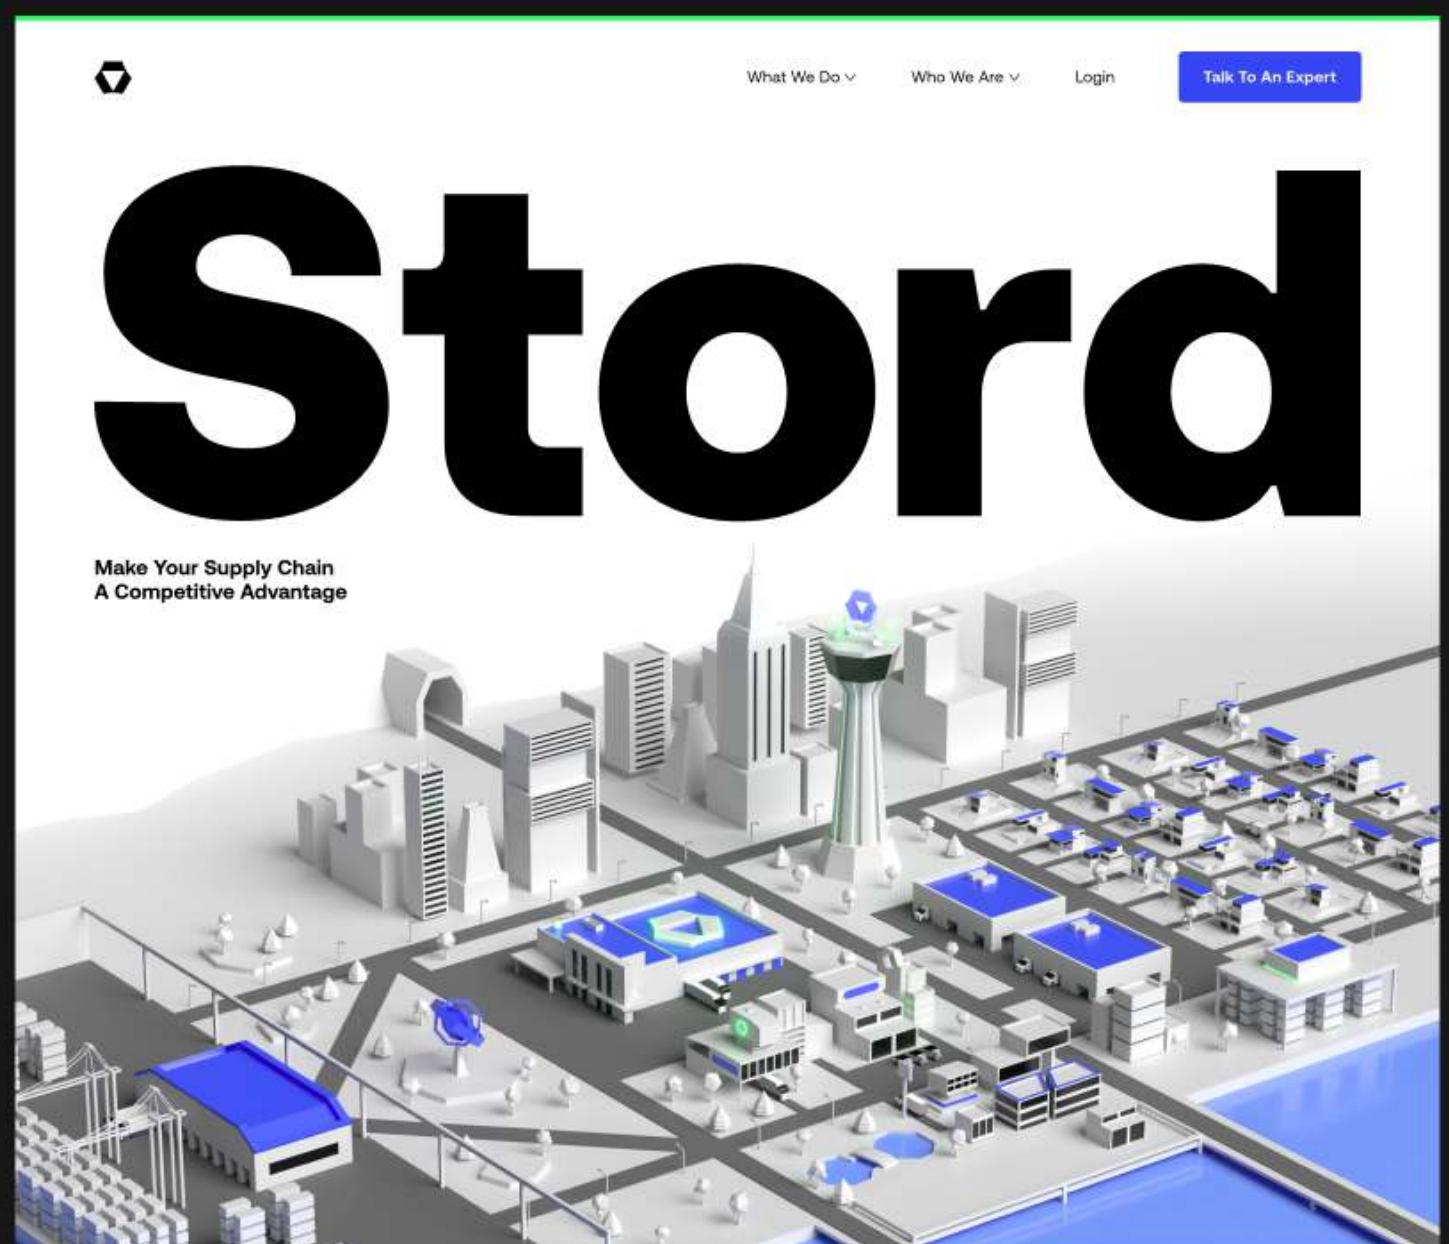

Since the launch, Stord has become a unicorn with raised rounds of $65m, $90m, and $120m from investors including Kleiner Perkins, Founders Fund, and Susa Ventures.

It seems they've been named to every industry award list across growth, design, and marketing. Headcount has swelled from less than 200 to 600+. They've won increasingly large enterprise partnerships including Coca-Cola, BODYARMOR, and Dollar General. Year-over-year growth has consistently exceeded 300% and, as of May 2022, Stord passed $200 million in annualized revenue run-rate.

While we can't claim their success as our own, the brand and website, years after launch, remain strong to this day. And their founders and marketing teams refer work to us and publicly refer to the Studio Freight team as "the GOATs."

+ Studio Freight are the folks you go to when you require the absolute, no compromises, best-in-the-business-level work. The brand update we did with Freight radically accelerated the already potent trajectory of Stord. Beyond the growth ($200M+ ARR), which by no means should be understated, the studio's work permeated across more areas of the business than I could have imagined. The level of talent we were attracting skyrocketed. Employee engagement hit levels that I never thought possible. Almost every competitor tried to either copy our style and/or poach our team. Stord is a beast of a business, spanning digital and physical with multiple products in each domain coming together to create a new category of supply chain solutions, Cloud Supply Chain. Freight's value spanned far beyond just their visual prowess. Their team was able to learn a career's worth of insight about complex supply chain operations in weeks' time. Their support in category creation and messaging stands shoulder to shoulder with their design efforts. Plenty of people can arrange pixels in a pleasing format on a page... But far, far fewer that can own a complex story, distill it down to its essence, and communicate it in an easy to understand, yet impossible to ignore fashion. And when you couple that skillset with a relentless pursuit of being the best at what they do, you get a group that doesn't fucking miss.

Approach

We were chillin' out, maxin', relaxin', all cool and all, when a dream project rolled up: Studio Freight was asked to create the website, and limited-edition merch, for the "Official Bad Boys Movie Store."

You can take the kids out of the 90s, but you can't take the 90s out of the kids. We slid over the hood of our Porsche 911 Turbo and peeled out to get started, or something like that. Our first homework assignment? Watch the movies.

While the franchise is full of F-bombs and dead bodies, we had to keep the content clean. No cops, no guns, no violence. No problem. The merch capsule featured iconic quotes and scenes designed in a contemporary style, including an umbrella that read "Undercover."

We put the brand front-and-center on the website, they didn't have to ask us to make the logo bigger. We also built it with light-, dark-, and Miami-modes, designed the FAQ bullet list with bullets, fashioned crosshairs as the cursor, and hid an easter egg in the footer (a link to the original "Bad Boys" song).

Outcomes

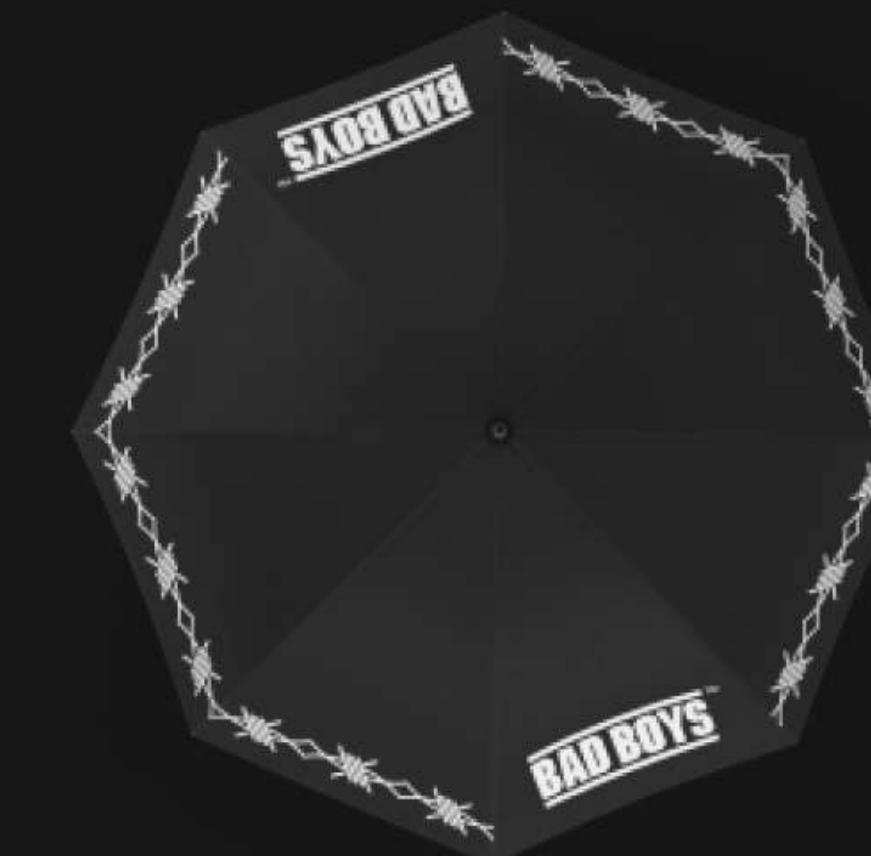

Most merch stores disappoint because they're made by marketing teams using uninspired Shopify templates for the purpose of making a quick buck. And consumers can tell.

Not this time. We went deep to build a headless website and merch with an authenticity that die-hards can sense and appreciate (and buy). We made everything as fans, for fans, of the franchise.

The drop did seven figures in revenue in under ten days. Following the success of the project, we were asked to build websites and merch for other familiar names: The Fresh Prince of Bel-Air, DJ Jazzy Jeff, Patrick Mahomes, and Pelé.

These collections went on to win design awards and receive press from the likes of Complex, TMZ, XXL Magazine, and HipHopDX.

We ride together. We die together. To celebrate the 25th Anniversary of the “Bad Boys” franchise, Will Smith’s family media company needed to do an unmissable ecommerce drop.

[Mike, Marcus, and Julie start arguing; nobody paying attention to his gun; Julie just walks out]

CLERK: Hey, freeze b*tch!

[As he points the gun her way; in a flash Mike and Marcus stop arguing and point their guns at his head]

MIKE: YOU freeze, b*tch!

CLERK: Oh sh*t, I'm *ed.

MIKE: Now back up, put the gun down, and get me a pack of Tropical Fruit Bubblicious.

MARCUS: And some Skittles.

BAD BOYS FOR LIFE.

WE RIDE TOGETHER.
WE DIE TOGETHER.
